MURPHY, the Jeweler.

MISS GERTRUDE MUSE.

The Grim Reaper this morning entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Muse of West Second street and at 7 o'clock the spirit of their eldest daughter, Gertrude, passed to the Great Beyond.

The announcement of her death will cause genuine sorrow to her many friends throughout the city.

Several weeks ago she was stricken with diphtheria, and though suffering a severe attack she was carefully nursed through the terrible disease and was thought to be almost well. She had recovered sufficiently to be about her room, and was seemingly in a fair way to again shortly mingle with her devoted schoolmates.

Sunday, however, she was again taken very ill, and although all that medical science could prescribe was done for her relief she passed away this morning.

Gertrude Muse was sixteen years of age—that period when life seems happiest and best.

She was this year a member of the Graduating Class of the Maysville High School and her classmates today mourn the loss of one of their most popular members.

To her bereaved parents and little sister the sympathy of the entire community goes out.

No arrangements for the funeral have yet been made.

MRS. ELIZABETH PARK.

Mrs. Elizabeth Park, born near Minerva about eighty-five years ago, died the past week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. L. Waugh, at Hamilton, O.

Her maiden name was Elizabeth Mannen, and she was a daughter of General John Mannen and Charity Cribfield, two of the very oldest and most prominent of the pioneer families of Mason county.

She was first married to Mr. William Soward and two daughters, Mrs. Kate Hamilton and Mrs. Fannie Waugh, were born to them.

Mr. Soward died about thirty years ago and she afterwards married Mr. Park of near Higginport, who passed away about fourteen years since.

Mr. Park's remains were interred at Rural, O.

Of William Finn, in Jail Here Under Robbery Indictment

Much has been said and written about William Finn, incarcerated in jail here, but little of the man's history has ever come to light. The following is from the pen of a gentleman in this city who is in a position to know wherof he speaks, and he writes of the unfortunate young man as follows—

Ever since William Finn, alias Thomas Lowrey, was arrested in October, 1903, charged with nipping a diamond from William R. Varian, the public press has frequently referred to the circumstance that influential men were interested in him, and since those men were Democrats it was hinted at that Finn was evidently a political henchman and thereby obtained his "pull."

It seems, however, from recent developments that these surmises were wide of the mark.

The true story of the influence back of him is to the effect that in St. Paul, Minn., Finn's father was Lieutenant of Police, beloved by the entire force and greatly admired by the Chief for his bravery.

Some two years ago, in a riot, he was killed while faithfully discharging his duty and his fate was mourned by the entire city.

He left surviving him a widow and several children, some of them small, among them William.

When the mother of William heard of his arrest in Maysville, she went to the Chief of Police of St. Paul in her distress and enlisted his sympathies.

A short time prior thereto a meeting of the Chiefs of Police from all the important cities of the United States had been held in Louisville and St. Paul's Chief had attended and became very friendly with Louisville's Chief, and to help the widow of his dead Lieutenant he communicated with the Chief of Police of Louisville, who in turn communicated with Joseph Pugh, the Chief of Police of Covington, who, being made conversant with the great agony of William's mother and sister, did attempt to render some aid to the unfortunate young man and while his services were intended in the best of good faith yet they were of no aid to him, quite the worse.

There are no monied or political friends behind Finn, it seems, and the only influence that has ever been exerted to save him from long imprisonment are the appeals of an agonizing mother and the tears and sobs of a broken-hearted fifteen-year-old sister.

But these are potent factors in this world, and are often more to be relied on than are the efforts of those of great place and favor.

In the event young Finn obtains his freedom it is to be hoped he will spend the remainder of his days striving to make happy and prosperous those members of his family who have stood so valiantly and lovingly by him in the days of his misfortune.

The train was turned over to the Big Four in Cincinnati and the same schedule was maintained to Chicago.

The Sunday-school children of the Christian Church will reverse the usual order of things by dispensing charity instead of being the recipients of gifts during the yuletide season. The children have evidently been reading Bible lessons where it speaks of he who gives being more blessed than he who receives, so this year instead of having a Christmas tree they will distribute gifts among the worthy, needy poor, thereby increasing their own pleasure as well as bringing joy and gladness to the hearts of their less fortunate brothers and sisters in Christ. It is a thoughtful and beautiful idea in thus remembering the poor and for the time being causing them to forget the toils of a weary existence by a short season of unalloyed pleasure.

A FEW EXTRACTS

From the Sermon of Dr. John C. Molloy Sunday Morning

At the Central Presbyterian Church Sunday morning Dr. John C. Molloy spoke on Proverbs XVI, 32: "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city," the topic being "True Heroism Lies in Self-mastery."

He spoke of extreme sensitiveness as not a work of culture, but of its lack, and of the evils of a captious and irritable spirit unrestrained, meekness, humility and a forgiving temper being traits of true greatness. The fables of Hercules conquering everything but his own furious temper and dying in agony through the Nessus's spirit finds a parallel in the life of Alexander, conqueror of the world, torn with remorse over the murder of his best friend and self-destructed by a drunken debauch. To say you are "mad" instead of angry is bad English, but a thoroughly angry man is liable to be a mad man. The true hero should not be the sport of his own passions at any point. Shakespeare introduces characters not to point a moral but to adorn a tale, but in holding the mirror up to nature he makes his characters unfailingly paint a moral, as does history—an intentionally. The Macbeths, Richard the Third, King John and others show the awful fruit of unrestrained ambition. Othello, strong, calm and brave, is involved in pitiful ruin when Iago arouses the terrible passion which consumes him. Mark Anthony, the greatest man in the world after Julius Caesar's death, dies a maudlin weeping through the domination of a guilty passion. Timon of Athens, a victim of cynicism, is really the victim of selfishness. Ingratitude could never have sorrowed the Apostle Paul or Jonathan Edwards. Lear, Goneril and Regan in varying degrees illustrate the evils of selfishness also. Shakespeare shows that unbridled human passions are the spades with which men dig the graves of their happiness, their bodies and their souls. Real life but confirms his teaching. Some "great men" have been slain by even a whisky bottle.

The great battleground of earth is within the human breast. There alone the soul fights, and wins, or surrenders, and perishes. And yet none need fight alone. The good God says to each man, "My grace is sufficient for thee," and with His help freely offered and freely given every soul can win the victor's crown.

NINE-FOOT CHANNEL

Approved By Rivers and Harbors Committee for the Ohio

Advocates of a nine-foot channel in the Ohio river will have cause for rejoicing before the present session of Congress ends. It has been practically decided by the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors to commit the Federal Government to the great project.

Ten days ago the Committee concluded to make provision for a preliminary survey, but it will now go even further than that. An appropriation is to be recommended to create a nine-foot stage for a distance of thirty miles below Pittsburgh by changing the size of locks and dams Nos. 1 to 6 or 7, inclusive.

To increase the dimensions of these works will cost, it is estimated, less than $400,000 in addition to the original cost, which averages almost $1,000,000 for each lock and dam.

When the Committee does this it will virtually make it incumbent upon Congress to enlarge the entire system down the river. Already the construction of thirty-seven locks and dams calculated to give a six-foot depth as far as Cincinnati has been authorized.

The needs of the lower river are as urgent as those at Pittsburgh, and, therefore, the excess of the entire nine-foot project will be sured when that depth is given to the upper end of the stream.

If you had seen me a year ago, before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and had noticed the sunken eyes, sallow complexion, and general emaciated condition, and compared that person with me I am today, robust, hearty and well, you would not wonder that I feel thankful to you and your wonderful medicine, which restored me to new life and health in five months, and saved me from an awful operation."—MISS IRENE HAPGOOD, 1022 Sandwich St., Windsor, Ont.

Ovaritis or inflammation of the ovaries or fallopian tubes which adjoin the ovaries may result from sudden stopping of the monthly flow, from inflammation of the womb, and many other causes. The slightest indication of trouble with the ovaries, indicated by dull throbbing pain in the side, accompanied by heat and shooting pains, should claim your instant attention. It will not cure itself, and a hospital operation, with all its terrors, may easily result from neglect.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I can truly say that you have saved my life, and I cannot express my gratitude to you in words.

"Before I wrote to you telling how I felt, I had doctored for over two years steady and spent in that time, and failed to do me any good.

“Dear Lydia E. Pinkham:—I am writing to thank you for your kind and thoughtful letter. I am still suffering from a severe attack of ovaritis, and have been unable to get any relief from any other physician. I have tried every remedy known to science, but nothing has been of any avail. I have been advised to undergo an operation, but I am afraid of the results. Your compound has given me great relief, and I am now able to go about without pain. I am sending you a sample of my hair, which is very thin and brittle. I hope you will accept it as a token of my gratitude. I am enclosing a check for $10.00.

It looks very much like the religious element of Maysville does not care to know more concerning the Holy Land, for only a few attended the stereopticon lecture last night by Prof. E. A. Fox at the First M. E. Church, South. Those who were there enjoyed a fine, elevating evening of instruction. Every one present appreciated the presence of one Pastor, Dr. Evans, as his questions were good.

E LEDGER.

The Rev. T. D. Witt Talmage says—
"A newspaper whose column overflows with the advertisements of business men has more influence in attracting attention than any other agency in town or city than any other agency that can be employed. People go where there is business. Capital and labor are the two great factors that are propulsive in a community. No power on earth is so strong to build up a town as newspapers well patronized, and this power should be appreciated."
